BAR FIGHTS 2013

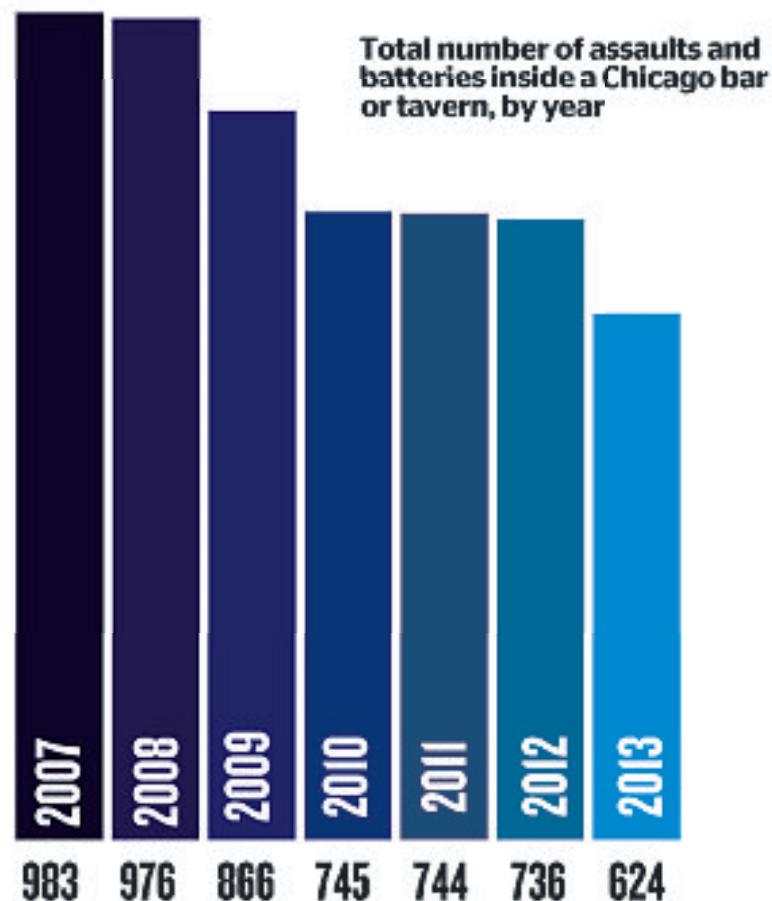

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

August 2012, RedEye ranked the blocks with the most assaults and batteries that had occurred inside bars. The number of brawls has fluctuated, yet steadily declined, throughout the years, from 983 reports in 2007 to 745 in 2012.

With a 2013 of Stanley Cup celebrations, St. Patrick's Day crawling and general weekend bar crawling behind us, we took a fresh look at the numbers. Last year, 624 bar fights were reported to police, the lowest number in the data we examined dating back to 2007.

But some familiar faces took the lead when it comes to where the incidents occur. In 2013, six of the Top 10 blocks were near Chicago's downtown, many in or around River North and Streeterville. In five of the past seven years, the area near State and Division streets (the 0-100 block of West Division), has made the Top 3 in rankings for the most fights reported. It wasn't until last year that area dropped to seventh in the rankings. MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.COM | eSWASKO

You, your paycheck and the CEO

Soon we'll all know how much big bosses make compared with employees

Chicago Tribune

Almost 1,000 "unique" letters have been sent to the Securities and Exchange Commission since September about the issue. An additional 127,000 form letters have also rolled in.

They come from backers and opponents of a new rule that will require most public companies to disclose the ratio of the total annual compensation of their chief executive to the median pay of "all" of a company's employees.

The SEC is responsible for coming up with the final rules, which were mandated by the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. The financial reform legislation called for, among other things, the disclosure of a new ratio comparing a company's median annual compensation for employees to that of its chief executive. In September, the agency proposed rules and said it was welcoming public comments on them.

YOUNG MONEY

SEC Chair Mary Jo White testified last month before the Senate Banking Committee about Dodd-Frank, including the pay ratio disclosure.

"The commission has received numerous comments on the proposal, and the staff is working to prepare recommendations for the commission on a final rule," she said in her prepared testimony.

In the past, compensation disclosures have focused on the pay of top executives and boards of directors at public companies. In the future, if the median of the annual total compensation of all company employees is $45,790, for example, and the annual total compensation of a CEO is $12,260,000, then the pay ratio disclosed would be 1-to-268, meaning the CEO's annual total compensation is 268 times that of the median of the annual total compensation of all employees.

Industry groups, individual companies, law firms and executive compensation consultants have raised concerns about the complexity of the requirements and the cost to calculate the ratio. They also say it's not important or helpful to investors.

Smaller companies, typically those with less than $50 million in revenue, would be exempt. Also, the SEC doesn't spell out a specific methodology for companies to identify a median employee. It said, for example, that companies may choose to identify the median using all their employees or by using statistical sampling.

Still, compliance costs for some companies could be "substantial," the SEC said in its 162-page document with the proposed rules. At least one company has put a $2 million price tag on the work.

"It's a tremendous undertaking for any large international company with no concomitant benefit to its shareholders," Bob Murphy, a former SEC lawyer who is senior counsel at the Dykema law firm in Washington, told the Tribune.

Still, he believes that the final rules will be adopted this year "substantially as proposed," with the pay ratio disclosure required in 2016 proxy statements.

"I think that there is very little chance that it won't get adopted this year," Murphy said.

Wiggle room on Obamacare deadline?

Reuters

WASHINGTON The Obama administration will soon issue new Obamacare guidelines allowing people to enroll in health coverage after a March 31 deadline, but only under certain circumstances, according to sources close to the administration.

The sources said the new federal guidelines for consumers in the 36 states served by the federal health insurance marketplace and its website, healthcare.gov, would allow people to enroll after March 31 if they had tried earlier and were prevented by system problems including technical glitches.

On Friday, the administration published in the Federal Register new regulations that would allow state-run marketplaces new flexibility in setting insurance coverage effective dates for people who sign up during special enrollment periods.

President Obama's Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act requires most Americans to be enrolled in health coverage by March 31 or pay a penalty. It was not clear how much of an effort a potential applicant would have to make in order to qualify for a special enrollment period.

Last December, the administration granted special enrollment periods to thousands of people who were unable to complete enrollment on healthcare.gov for coverage beginning Jan. 1. Similar steps have been expected for the March 31 enrollment deadline for several weeks.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services could not confirm whether an announcement was expected soon but said the administration would not neglect people who have problems enrolling.

Do You Have Unrelenting Back PAIN

Caused by Herniated or Bulging Discs or Failed Back Surgery?

FIND OUT IN 60 MINUTES OR LESS IF THIS NEW TREATMENT CAN HELP YOU

The common cause of all these conditions is often a herniated or bulging disc in your lower back.

Let me explain...

When cushions in your back joints, called discs, get injured or wear out, they begin to degenerate and cause pain. Bulging and herniations begin to form, pressing on the nerve roots.

For many local residents these pains have become a thing of the past, thanks to a specialized treatment called Spinal Decompression combined with Cold Laser Therapy.

Do You Have Any of the Following?

- Sharp leg pains
- Lower Back Pain
- Herniated discs
- Leg numbness
- Shooting hip pain
- Muscle spasms
- Sciatica
- Lumbago

Finally, You Have an Option Other Than Drugs or Surgery

New research in a treatment called cold laser therapy is having a profound effect on patients suffering with pain. Unlike the cutting type of laser seen in movies and used in medical procedures, laser therapy penetrates the surface of the skin with no heating effect of damage.

Heal Your Sciatica, Stenosis and Nerve Pain

Would you like to see if decompression treatments combined with cold laser therapy will help you get rid of your pain? For 10 days only, $35 will get you all the services I normally charge new patients $250 for!

What does this offer include?

An in-depth consultation about your health and well-being where I will listen...really listen...to the details of your case.

- A complete neuromuscular examination.
- A full set of specialized x-rays to determine if a spinal problem is contributing to your pain or symptoms.
- A thorough analysis of your exam and x-ray findings so we can start mapping out your plan to being pain free.
- You'll get to see everything first hand and find out if this amazing treatment will be your pain solution, like it has been for so many other patients.
- I'll answer all your most probing questions about our pain free back pain evaluation and what it can do for you.

The appointment takes less than an hour and we get new patients in quickly.

What Does Spinal Decompression Feel Like?

You'll simply lie down and then a specialized belt is gently put around your waist. We'll set the machine to focus on your problem area – then the advanced decompression computer system will do the rest.

Call 312-212-1150 before April 7, 2014 and tell the receptionist you'd like to come in for the Decompression & Cold Laser Evaluation before March 31, 2012. I look forward to helping you get rid of your pain so you can start living a healthier, more joyful life.

Sincerely,
Paul Ruzila, D.C.

Federal and Medicare restrictions apply.

P.S. Why suffer another day?

That's no way to live, not when there could be an easy solution to your problem.

Take me up on my offer and call today 312-212-1150.

Here's What Our Patients Say.....

Before treatment on the Spinal Decompression Table I could not put very much weight on my left leg. I could not walk or stand for long periods of time and had tremendous pain in my lower back and down left leg. Since having treatments the pain is gone! I can walk and put weight on my left leg. Would highly recommend and have told friends about my results.

BREAKING DOWN THE DATA

● = one crime There is no easy way to search and pull a list of crimes reported on the lakefront trail. RedEye set out to provide a snapshot of the data using the city's online portal to search for all crimes reported in the vicinity of the trail in 2013 and 2012. The data represent crimes reported within 200 feet of the trail on park or lakefront property. To simplify, RedEye extracted incidents listed as occurring on Lake Shore Drive or the streets that intersect with it. Incidents were mapped according to the approximate coordinates supplied by the police department.

Safety first

“In terms of overall safety, we think the lakefront trail is a safe facility to use.”

—Jason Jenkins, education specialist for the Active Transportation Alliance

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE
Right about now, Chicagoans are stir-crazy: eager to get outside without a puffy coat and enjoy the few warm months the city offers between winters.

Once that first warm day hits, Chicagoans flock to the lakefront trail. It's where they train for marathons, where they bike to work, where they walk their dogs. Day or night.

With as many 30,000 people a day visiting stretches of path between Ardmore Avenue to the north and 71st Street to the south, there's never a dull moment. And while the majority of the activity that takes place there is unremarkable, there also are reports of police activity. So, how safe is one of Chicago's most popular warm-weather destinations?

The question is difficult to answer because of the way the police department keeps its data. The trail is not a location category that officers can check in a police report, which means crimes there are not easily searchable.

“In terms of overall safety, we think the lakefront trail is a safe facility to use,” said Jason Jenkins, education specialist for the Active Transportation Alliance, an advocacy organization that promotes walking, bicycling and taking public transportation. “There are common-sense steps users can take to increase their own safety.”

Using city crime data, RedEye plotted police incidents reported near and along the trail in 2013 and compared them with the numbers for the year prior. In 2013, there were roughly 120 crimes reported in close proximity to the 18-mile path, compared with about 100 the year before. In both years, the incidents represented less than 1 percent of crime reported in the city overall.

While it may not be a comprehensive look at all crimes reported near the trail, the limited data does provide some insight.

Theft was the most commonly reported crime near the trail, which meanders past beaches, harbors, Soldier Field, Navy Pier and McCormick Place. Others ranged from narcotics to battery to more serious offenses, such as robbery. In July, police issued a community alert after three robberies were reported along the trail.

Where does crime happen on the lakefront trail?

Both Chicago Park District security and the Chicago Police Department patrol the lakefront.

“The Chicago Police Department is committed to the safety of all residents and visitors and, while we don't discuss deployment specifics, we do have seasonal bike teams, cars and officers on foot along the lakefront to ensure a safe and enjoyable experience for everyone,” the department said in a statement.

The warm weather brings more people outdoors, which can provide greater opportunity for crime, said Arthur Lurigio, psychology and criminal justice professor at Loyola University Chicago. People who are having a nice time relaxing may not be as vigilant, he said. But crowds also can increase protection, he said. If a lot of people are around, there are a lot of witnesses, which could increase the likelihood of getting arrested, and that could be a deterrent for committing a crime, he said.

“I would think especially during daylight hours, you're actually safe on the trail,” he said.

It's important to be mindful of your surroundings, said Wendy Jaehn, executive director of the Chicago Area Runners Association.

“I definitely think it's safe,” she said of the trail. She runs

Mind your manners

Since the trail is used by everyone including pedestrians, runners, cyclists, rollerbladers and even Segways, there are five etiquette tips for users to safely share the trail. SOURCE: LEAGUE OF ILLINOIS BICYCLISTS along the lakefront nearly every day and often alone. "We wouldn't put runners out there if we felt it was unsafe."

Safety involves more than crime. The trail is used widely by cyclists, joggers, walkers, kids and tourists—and it can become a contested collision course.

Clashes between bicyclists and pedestrians are difficult to measure, but they do happen.

Physical safety due to traffic on the path is a concern for users as well, said Julie Hochstadter, director of The Chainlink, an online networking site for cyclists in Chicago.

Some of the worst bike accidents have happened on the trail, she said. She has seen a cyclist and runner get carried off the trail on stretchers. At times, kids dart across the path and pedestrians walk four across as cyclists try to speed by.

"Unfortunately, there's only so much real estate and it's really like the Kennedy [expressway] during rush hour in the summer," she said.

The Chainlink and CARA post information using their social media networks or websites to keep members informed of incidents reported on the trail.

While trail users don't want to discourage others from taking the path, they did suggest safety precautions. They recommend having a running or biking buddy, using the trail when it's light out, telling people you are going to be on the path if it's late at night or making sure people know your route.

Other tips include glancing around periodically, turning down volume on headphones or not using them at all, leaving valuables at home, carrying a cellphone in case you need to call for help and reporting any incidents to police.

"It's such a serene, beautiful place. Although it's an absolutely beautiful part of the city, there's just things you need to be aware of when it comes to your safety and security," Hochstadter said.

Don't block the trail if you stop or are going with a group.

Yield to others when entering, crossing or turning onto trails.

Hands off, Chicago

Chicago Tribune

Almost 1 out of 5 drivers in Chicago are likely violating the city's 9-year-old ban on using hand-held cellphones while behind the wheel, according to a state study that prompts questions about whether a new and stricter Illinois law will reduce accidents caused by distracted driving.

Chicago had the state's highest rate of drivers visibly using electronic devices to either talk on the phone or send or read text messages, according to the statewide study conducted by the Illinois Department of Transportation.

"The survey really told us a lot about what is going on every day," said John Webber, IDOT's communications director and the department's former interim director of traffic safety.

The observational survey of more than 33,000 drivers was done on busy state highways, local roads and residential streets, officials said.

The purpose of the study, conducted in November and provided by IDOT to the Tribune, was to create a baseline to determine the effectiveness of a state law that went into effect Jan. 1 and is intended to further tighten restrictions enacted in 2013.

The new law prohibits drivers from using hand-held cellphones for any purpose. Hands-free technology such as Bluetooth headsets, earpieces and voice-activated devices are permitted.

The new provisions go further than a texting-while-driving ban that went into effect in Illinois last year and provide uniformity across the state, officials said. About 80 municipalities already had banned hand-held cellphone use while driving, IDOT said. That includes Chicago, which has had a ban since 2005.

In Chicago, nearly 18 percent of all drivers who were observed during the study—about 21 percent of female drivers and 15 percent of male drivers—were holding cellphones or other electronic devices close to their ears or faces.

The statewide rate was about 12 percent, the study found. There was a similar gender gap among the smaller portion of violators statewide, with about 14 percent of female drivers and 10 percent of male drivers.

Electronic device use by drivers in Cook County was 12 percent and almost 13 percent in DuPage, Kane, Lake, McHenry and Winnebago counties, the IDOT study found.

'Homeland' actor Rebhorn dies at 65

1 James Rebhorn, the veteran character actor best known for his recent work on the Showtime drama "Homeland," has died of melanoma, his wife, Rebecca Linn, said Sunday. Rebhorn died Friday at his home in South Orange, N.J., at the age of 65.

3 officers missing after bases seized in Crimea

2 Three Ukrainian military officers on the Crimean peninsula remained missing Sunday and were believed to be held by Russian forces, a Ukrainian official said, as the Russians continued to seek full control of the peninsula's military sites.

Turkey shoots down Syrian military plane

4 Turkish armed forces shot down a Syrian plane on Sunday that Turkey said had crossed into its air space in an area where Syrian rebels have been battling President Bashar Assad's forces for control of a border crossing.

Wash. landslide kills 8

6 OLYMPIA, Wash. The death toll rose to eight and 18 people were missing on Sunday after a landslide in Washington state buried homes and cars under mud and debris up to 15 feet deep, authorities said.

Eight people also were injured when rain-soaked embankments along State Route 530 near Oso, Wash., about 55 miles northeast of Seattle, gave way on Saturday morning and washed out at least six homes.

A spokesman for the Snohomish County Sheriff's Office said a total of eight bodies had been found in the square mile of tangled debris, rocks, trees and mud by nightfall.

Snohomish County Fire District 21 Chief Travis Hots told an earlier news conference,

"We didn't find anybody alive. There was no sign of life" after a search of much of the area on foot.

The tally of missing was likely to grow, Hots said. The rescue mission was to halt at dusk because of treacherous, quicksand-like conditions, and would resume at dawn Monday, Hots said.

Some rescue workers had been mired in mud up to their armpits and had to be dragged to safety, authorities said.

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee flew over the area Sunday. He told the news conference, "I have a sense that we're going to have some hard news here."

The slide in the foothills of the Cascade

Mountains along the Stillaguamish River piled mud, rock and debris up to 15 feet deep in some places.

It blocked the flow of the river, creating floods and a backup of water behind a natural dam of mud and debris, but the threat to people downriver had begun to ease, Inslee said.

The highway was closed in both directions, with no timeline for it to be reopened, he said.

The Snohomish County sheriff's office has asked people affected by the slide to report to the Red Cross so an accurate count can be made of the missing.

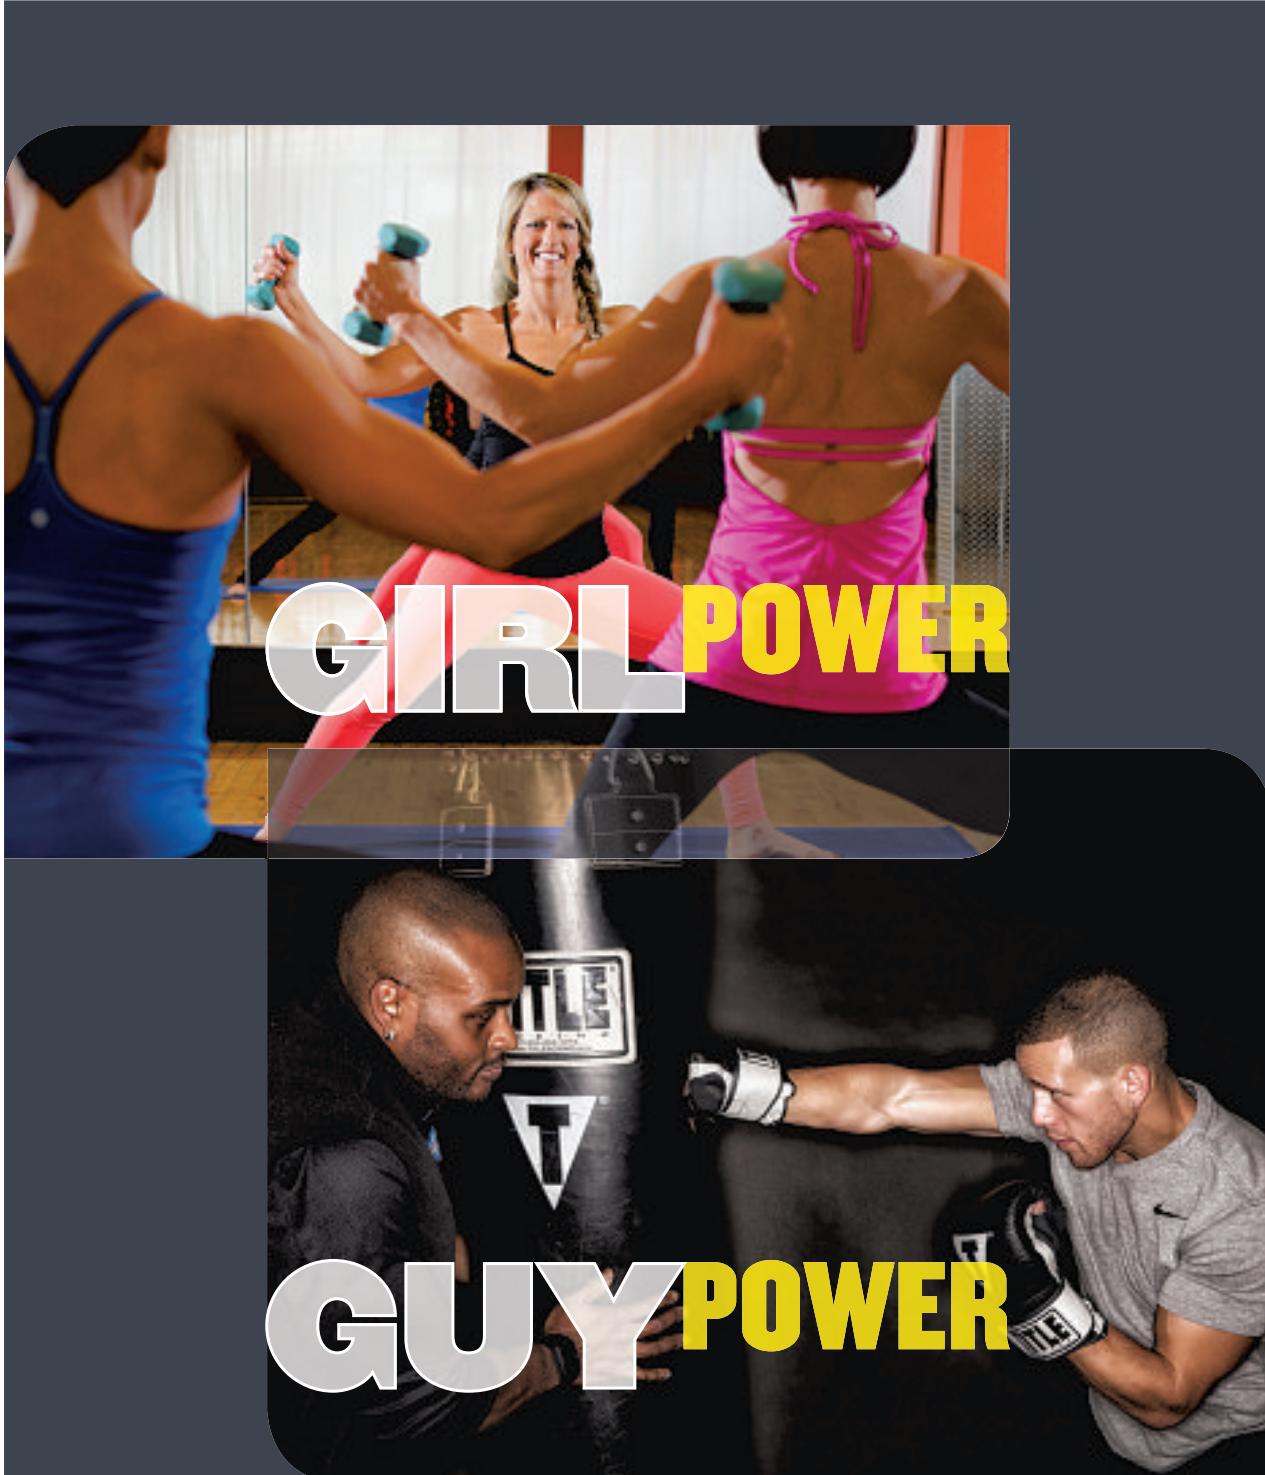

Washington state Lieutenant Gov. Brad Owen on Saturday evening declared a state of emergency in Snohomish County.

Which NCAA tourney Cinderellas will keep on dancin'?

GETTY IMAGES

TENNESSEE

No. 17 seed, Midwest Region

Best tourney finish: Elite Eight in 2010

Believe because: Like VCU in 2011, which reached the Final Four, the Volunteers are an 11-seed that had to play a first-round game. Momentum, baby.

Doubt because: They'll have to beat No. 2-seeded Michigan, then probably face defending champ Louisville. Gulp. Plus, how fierce can a team be if its fight song includes the lyrics "once there was a girl on Rocky Top ... wild as a mink, sweet as soda pop"?

Chicago mind reader Mark Toland made NCAA tourney predictions after Selection Sunday, and they're sealed at RedEye until after the tournament. Watch him make believers out of RedEye staffers at redeyechicago.com.

STANFORD

No. 10 seed, South Region

Best tourney finish: Final Four in 1998

Believe because: Stanford's defense has been stout in this year's tournament, allowing just 53 points in its first win and 57 in its second.

Doubt because: The Cardinal ranks 246th this season (out of 346 teams) with 11.8 assists per game. This is no time to be selfish, guys!

Cinderella cred: 3 slippers

GETTY IMAGES

DAYTON

No. 11 seed, South Region

Best tourney finish: Runner-up in 1967

Believe because: Ohio State and Syracuse both had a chance to upset the Flyers at the buzzer this weekend and failed. Sounds like fate has a hand in this.

Doubt because: One of the Flyers' losses this season was to Richmond, which finished the year 14-18. Which means they're as safe a bet as milk that's been left out all day.

1	How's your NCAA tournament bracket looking?	It's on life support. Please call Nurse Jackie for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.	Great! Duke and Ohio State won, right?	Like the last episode of "The Walking Dead": gruesome and downright depressing.	Remember the elevator scene in "The Shining"? Only slightly less red.	About as good as Jabari Parker's collegiate basketball career. #SorryJabari #GoGreen
2	Why were there so many upsets in the NCAA tournament's first weekend?	Because the basketball gods don't want me to win the BIG money.	What do you mean, "Are you [bleeping] kidding me?" I was out of town.	If you lost a shot at a billion dollars, you'd be upset too!	Thanks, Obama.	[Bleeping] Ventriloquist, or global warming, or because it's supposed to snow Tuesday. Or whatever.
3	Which former Bear will haunt the team most next season?	Jeff Fisher. Please see the St. Louis Rams defensive line.	They did WHAT? WHO? Ron Mercer has a college now?	The Ghost of George Halas, who will later be revealed to be Jerry Angelo in a spooky costume.	The Galloping Ghost, Red Grange, obvs.	Jay Cutler (yes, I understand he's still on the team). #GoLions
4	What will change when the Bulls play Indiana for the second time in three days?	The Bishop Ford freeway traffic. Is Noah driving the team bus?	OH GOD, I bet a LOT of money with a very, very bad person.	Taj Gibson will flip flop on flopping. See what I did there?	The date on the calendar, the position of the sun in relation to the Earth ...	Derrick Rose will have a different color wrap on his knee. So, basically nothing.
5	Welcome Teuvo Teravainen to the Blackhawks.	Hey, buddy! Look what the Hawks added to the menu at the UC: savusilli, pickled herring and paima. Yum?	Oh God, I have to move! Change my name! HE'S GOING TO TAKE MY KNEES!	I looked up saying "welcome" in Finnish on Google, but can't spell it, let alone pronounce it.	Tervetuloa! Glad you're here to help Finnish out the season!	I couldn't care less. So, I'm all set. Thanks though.

League might be in store for a serious face-lift

Chicago Tribune

Owners, coaches and executives from all 32 NFL teams gather in Orlando, Fla., this week for the league's annual meeting, which opens Monday and wraps up Wednesday.

Among the items on the league's agenda are 13 rule-change proposals, seven possible bylaw changes and one resolution.

So what changes will NFL teams potentially vote on? Here are four proposals that caught our attention.

Proposal: Pushing the line of scrimmage for point-after-touchdown kick attempts to the 25-yard line, an increase of 23 yards.

Why? Well, the theory goes, because it has become a mere formality. Last season, only five of 1,267 extra-point attempts were unsuccessful.

Up for debate: Under this proposal, teams would attempt extra-point kicks equivalent to 43-yard field goals. Teams that elected to go for a 2-point conversion would still get the ball at the 2-yard line.

Why, for discussion's sake, would an extra-point kick of 43 yards be worth only one point while a 20-yard field goal would be worth three? And might there be some value in considering narrowing the goal posts from their current width of 18 feet, 6 inches?

Proposal: Moving kickoffs up to the 40-yard line.

Why? The motive here is said to be increasing player safety by reducing the number of collisions on kickoff returns. It has been only three years since the NFL moved kickoffs from the 30 to the 35, and now one team is pushing to move those kicks up another 5 yards.

Up for debate: As return specialist Devin Hester continues his career in Atlanta, his value (and others like him) as a returner may plummet if this proposal is adopted.

Proposal: The instant replay system could be expanded to include input on reviews from a centralized league officiating hub in New York.

Why? It's an ongoing quest around the league to improve the quality and reliability of replay review.

Up for debate: By having the league office involved in replay reviews as this proposal suggests, the league could gain oversight to help ensure that final calls are accurate.

Proposal: Overtime would be eliminated from exhibition games.

Why? Exhibition games can be painful enough to watch for four quarters. Why allow them to go any further?

Up for debate: This one should pass with little resistance. All in the name of player safety, of course.

Giggle me this

This is why athletes prefer to be boring. Before Stanford's game against Kansas in the NCAA tournament, two Kansas players giggled when asked if they had heard of Cardinal guard Chasson Randle (right). Well, the Jayhawks certainly have now. "It wasn't just a stab at me, it was a stab at our team," Randle said after Stanford upset the No. 2 seed Sunday. "And it was a little bit of extra motivation."

THE MOUTHWATCH

“ You come in, play defense, go from a guy who is just focused on defense and now my team is looking for me on offense. ... It would be a dream come true.”

—Bulls forward Taj Gibson, on what it would mean to win the NBA's Sixth Man of the Year award

Nashville 2, Blackhawks 0

Fans will have to wait before they see 19-year-old wunderkind Teuvo Teravainen play for the Hawks. They could have used a bit of something Sunday as they were shut out for only the second time this season. Corey Crawford made 15 saves as the Hawks (41-16-15) came up empty on four power plays.

The right Strypes

The Strypes

Big names in rock take notice as Irish youngsters put the genre on their backs

By Matt Pais | REDEYE

Ross Farrelly is 16. He lives with his parents. And right now, Dave Grohl, Elton John and The Who's Roger Daltrey can't get enough of him.

As singer for rising Irish rockers The Strypes (who won Best Developing Non-U.S. Act at SXSW), Farrelly has toured with Arctic Monkeys, appeared on "Conan" and scored a Top 5 album in the U.K. with the band's debut, "Snapshot," released last week in the States.

The record takes inspiration from American blues and its English R&B/rock adapters, delivering straightforward rock 'n' roll that, depending on where you're sitting, is either shamelessly nostalgic or a fitting, exciting tribute. Asked by phone whether he takes it as a compliment or insult that an online commenter snarkily noted, "I love historical re-enactments," Farrelly chooses the former.

What was going through his head when the band was invited to lunch at Elton John's:

"Everything was going by really fast and you don't really think about it till afterwards. It was just like going to another person's house and meeting. He was just down-to-earth; we just talked about music. I never really thought, 'Holy [bleep], this is Elton John' until afterwards."

What Conan O'Brien said to them on his show:

"After the song, he comes on and shakes hands to the band who plays. And he came backstage and started talking to us about Ireland and rock 'n' roll. He was just telling us where his family were from in Ireland, and we were just chatting about music and he said he was just complimenting us and saying that he never really comes back and says hello to the bands, but he came back and had to say hello to us."

Who he's listening to now:
The Specials

If Conan's popular in Ireland:
"Not really. I wouldn't say so."

On praise they've received:
"You kinda go, 'Yeah, don't be silly; it's only me.' But whenever people say nice things, you just take the compliment and get on with it and stuff. You can't really let anything throw your mind off balance or anything."

On some writers seeming to think the band will save rock and roll:
"Thanks very much. I hope to think so."

If they're more influenced by the Stones and Yardbirds or American blues artists:

"I think it's equal. Our whole interest in music started off with Stones and the Animals and the Yardbirds and stuff, and we found out that a lot of the songs were covers. And then we're like, 'Oh, who did them first?' And then we researched into the older blues stuff, and then that influenced all of us as well. We're also influenced by '70s punk and loads of different kinds of music."

The difference between a throwback (which I define to him as something that affectionately nods to influences) and a rip-off:

"Ripping off something is completely just copying something, and then a throwback as you've explained it is just a nod to your influences, which is what every band does. You can't not do it."

If he's heard a band that was doing something new:

"That's a hard question. Not really. Everything is from something. Everything has its own influences. No one can do anything new anymore."

On One Direction:

"I don't really care about them. They can do whatever they want. If they want to say hello to us, then we'll say hello to them. But I don't think anyone's going to arrange a meeting. ... It's just not what we're about. I'm sure they're lovely people."

Louis Tomlinson, Harry Styles and Niall Horan of One Direction
GETTY IMAGES FILE

MPAIS@TRIBUNE.COM
@MATTPAIS

Someone new he's discovered: Gary Clark Jr.

Favorite movie: "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid"

Guilty pleasure TV: "I like 'The Big Bang Theory.' That's probably my guilty pleasure. I know it's not that funny, but I laugh at it. A lot of the jokes are just geek jokes, but I like it."

A joke: "I haven't heard a silly word in yonks." ("Yonks" means a long time.)

More on 1D:

"People say 'the next One Direction,' and we're not at all. It is really annoying. Whatever age you are, you should just be [thought of] as another person. In the music business it's your talent [that matters]; that's what it should be. If you're good at something, that's all that should matter. You're representing something good instead of being a pin-up that's just manufactured to make money."

If it's hard to appeal to young music fans who aren't used to bands like the Strypes:

"I wouldn't call them music fans because people that listen to all that sort of stuff are just told to listen to it, whatever is pumping out of the shops or restaurants or whatever people go to nowadays. It's just blasting out; they don't really have a choice. They're kind of forced to like it. So I wouldn't really call them music fans. I think music fans tend to listen to more actual music, searching for stuff that is real. You know, actual instruments and has a meaning or has a purpose."

How they offer an opportunity to those who haven't had a chance to hear rock:

"Providing an alternative to all that poppy [bleep]."

On crossover appeal:

"The Arctic Monkeys; they're very British. All their lyrics are very British, and the way he pronounces words are, like, English slang words. So I can see how they wouldn't take off [in America]. But I think Irish bands connect better over here because of the whole American/Irish thing. ... A lot of [Americans] claim that they're Irish, so they kind of have a soft spot for Irish people I think."

If it's been weird to have success and still live at home:

"We haven't really had that huge level of success. I mean, I'm 16 years old; I should be living with my parents."

A SPOONFUL OF PITCHFORK

Get to know the new acts added to this year's fest

By Ernest Wilkins | REDEYE SOUND BOARD

More acts from the 2014 Pitchfork Music Festival (July 18-20 in Union Park) have been revealed, and you may be concerned that you aren't familiar with some of them. Sound cool with this cheat sheet breaking down a few of the newly announced artists.

FRIDAY, JULY 18

Avey Tare's Slasher Flicks

Where they're from:
Los Angeles

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "It's like if Dirty Projectors and Animal Collective made a horror movie together! How can you not love this?" (Just to be clear, that's not merely a comparison: This band actually does feature alums of both Animal Collective and Dirty Projectors.)

Standout song: "Little Fang"
What to expect: A fun set that might veer toward weird noodling before regaining course.

Isaiah Rashad

Where he's from:
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "Kendrick fans didn't give Rashad's 'Cilvia Demo' enough of a chance."

Standout songs: "Shot You Down," "RIP Kevin Miller"
What to expect: The introspective Rashad fits perfectly with his label-mates Schoolboy Q and Kendrick. Like them? You'll like him.

SATURDAY, JULY 19

FKA Twigs

Where she's from: England

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "The 'Papi Pacify' video is the hottest thing I've seen since that naked D'Angelo one."

Standout songs: "Papi Pacify," "Water Me"

What to expect: Ethereal R&B dripping with grade-A sexuality. This set needs to happen after dark.

Kelela

Where she's from: Maryland

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "Is 'Cut 4 Me' the best non-rap mixtape ever? I think so!"

Standout songs: "Bank Head," "Cut 4 Me"

What to expect: An amazing voice snugly wrapped in a blanket of electronic R&B production. One of the festival's must-sees.

SUNDAY, JULY 20

Hudson Mohawke

Where he's from: Scotland

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "I missed his and Lunice's set at TNGHT last year because I was watching R. Kelly."

Standout song: "Thunder Bay"

What to expect: As part of TNGHT, he had a prominent hand in crafting "Yeezus." Come to Hudson's set ready to do that weird, Kanye-popularized arm dance all the kids are doing these days.

DJ Rashad & DJ Spinn

Where they're from:
Chicago

Assertion you can use to sound informed: "DJ Rashad's playing for the second year in a row? Can he at least get a night slot this time?"

Standout songs: "Feelin," "She A Go"

What to expect: A sleeper pick for set of the weekend. Dance music, served Chicago-style. Bring a towel.

Hugh G. Rection and engage in depraved performance art (synced to music!) unlikely to appear in any accredited gallery or medium-clean sidewalk.

"Love and Air Sex" demonstrates that you can, in fact, make a relatively dull movie about this very non-dull subject. Chicago native Michael Stahl-David ("Cloverfield") stars as Stan, who flies back to Austin, Texas, from L.A. when he discovers his ex, Cathy (Ashley Bell of "The Last Exorcism"), is heading down there too. He finds that not only has his estranged BFF, Jeff (Zach Cregger of "The Whitest Kids U'Know"), split from Cathy's now-promiscuous BFF, Kara (Sara

Competitive air sex would seem to have infinite dramatic possibilities. After all, it's less like air guitar and more like mimes decided they're tired of being trapped in boxes and elected to tell the dirtiest X-rated stories imaginable. Contestants assign themselves crass names like Paxton of "The Innkeepers"), but Jeff also is about to compete in the championship of Air Sex, where the host solicits participants by chanting, "You must [bleep] the air!"

Had "Love and Air Sex" been revised into "Air Sex and Love," director/co-writer Bryan Poyer might have explored how people who devote time and brainpower to choreographing vivid simulations of hard-core action blend their personal lives with their on-stage antics. Instead, the film mostly is a night of average shenanigans that makes a few stops at sweet on the ultimate journey to innocuous. It's kinda cute seeing Stan flirt-texting with cellist/singer Haley (Addison Timlin)—just the kind of idealized cutie who must arrive to keep the story going—and all the excited teasing and apologetic retractions that come along with it.

But the mundane waffling about whether the couples will get back together generates less of an impression than the onslaught of lame gags about genitalia. The people acting out sex look like geniuses compared to the ones talking about it.

A practical joke posing as a brain teaser, "Enemy" seems like director Denis Villeneuve's "Up yours!" to people who complained about the explanation behind "Prisoners," his other collaboration with Jake Gyllenhaal. "Oh, you thought that was contrived? Fine. Here's a movie with no answers at all. See how you like it."

In "Enemy," Gyllenhaal plays Adam, a withdrawn Toronto history professor who discovers that a little-known actor looks exactly like him. As in, exactly like him. Same face, same voice, same handwriting, similar-looking blond significant others. At first Adam tries to get Anthony (also Gyllenhaal, obviously) on the phone, a foolish strategy compared to, say, just standing outside his place and forcing Anthony to see himself in another person. Eventually the two meet and stare at each other skeptically, saying little and acting like the universe has cracked open to reveal some massive, terrifying conspiracy. At no point does either say, "Holy crap! This is insane. Let's discuss our lives and see if we can find out what's up," like the rest of humanity would.

people here, but any examination of identity halts when neither character is challenged to change or investigate himself. Every so often this adaptation of Jose Saramago's novel "The Double"—not to be confused with the upcoming comedy "The Double," starring Jesse Eisenberg in a dual role—shows glimpses of a secret society in which men watch naked women touch themselves and stomp on giant spiders. Could an "Eyes Wide Shut"-inspired cult have cloned Adam/Anthony or something? Are they twins separated at birth? Are the filmmakers crudely saying that all men are, I don't know, just giant spiders waiting for women in high heels to crush them?

Feel free to guess, 'cause "Enemy" ain't spilling. Adam oddly never confronts the guy who (intentionally?) led him to Anthony. The film presents this situation with the utmost seriousness and not a lick of interest in narrative progress or the fun of doppelganger episodes of "Friends" or "How I Met Your Mother." Weird stuff like this can be fodder for cult fandom, but I suspect "Enemy" is a movie that will leave even huge Gyllenhaal fans feeling like they've been had.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aries March 21-April 19

The sun is making you super lusty. If you're currently single, you'll want to fix that situation as soon as possible. If you're in a relationship, you'll want to hold your lover hostage and stage a long seduction event.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Saturn is making it harder for you to get what you want, romantically. If you're in a relationship, maybe you're hoping to take things to the next level, but your partner keeps resisting. If you're single, you could have your eyes on someone who doesn't yet know you're alive.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Venus is bringing out your crazy side. You'll want to surprise your partner. Schedule a hot encounter on your apartment rooftop. Or put together a fun event at home that involves a whole new approach to love and seduction.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You're not going to get what you want if you push too hard. A moon opposition is telling you to take it slow. Be gentle if you're trying to impress that certain someone. And be kind if you're working at improving a long-term relationship.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Venus is inspiring you to try new ideas. Maybe you've been approaching this whole love thing the wrong way. If you used to be aggressive, it's time to act more laid-back. Or if you were too passive, you should stand up for what you want.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You could feel bothered and confused by that certain someone. Mercury is making it harder for you to connect with your true feelings. Don't rush into anything. Consider talking with a good friend, therapist or spiritual counselor.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Venus is inspiring you to try new ideas. Maybe you've been approaching this whole love thing the wrong way. If you used to be aggressive, it's time to act more laid-back. Or if you were too passive, you should stand up for what you want.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You could feel bothered and confused by that certain someone. Mercury is making it harder for you to connect with your true feelings. Don't rush into anything. Consider talking with a good friend, therapist or spiritual counselor.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

The more you try to cling to someone, the more that person might pull away. Mars is telling you to play it cool. Sometimes applying more pressure to the situation only makes it worse.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Saturn is trying to bring you healing, so don't fight it. You might need to make an unexpected decision in order to let go of toxic energy in your love life. Maybe there is a former flame who shouldn't remain your friend.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Tomorrow can be very different from today. The moon is reminding you that every day, you create your future. From the ashes of the past, you can construct something that will be much more positive and nurturing.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You'll enjoy spending time with casual friends this week as the moon enhances your social energy. Keep it light. You need a break from some of the intense stuff you've been dealing with lately. Hang out with people who can cheer you up.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Somebody you thought was cold toward you might suddenly warm up. If you have a crush on someone who has been unavailable, he or she might finally become interested in you. Venus is increasing your desirability.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could discover new levels of passion as the moon increases your sensuality. Sometimes you can be way too shy for your own good, but this week, you'll be far less inhibited. Express your true desires without fear.

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1783: Spain recognized the independence of the United States.

1883: Long-distance telephone service was inaugurated between Chicago and New York.

1972: Britain took over direct control in Northern Ireland in an effort to restore order.

2004: The European Union slapped Microsoft with a $613 million fine for abusively wielding its Windows software monopoly.

Cover clash

WINTOUR'S STATEMENT

Part of the pleasure of editing Vogue, one that lies in a long tradition of this magazine, is being able to feature those who define the culture at any given moment, who stir things up, whose presence in the world shapes the way it looks and influences the way we see it. I think we can all agree on the fact that that role is currently being played by Kim and Kanye to a T. (Or perhaps that should be to a K?)

As for the cover, my opinion is that it is both charming and touching, and it was, I should add, entirely our idea to do it; you may have read that Kanye begged me to put his fiancee on Vogue's cover. He did nothing of the sort. The gossip might make better reading, but the simple fact of the matter is that it isn't true.

There's barely a strand of the modern media that the Kardashians haven't been able to master, and for good reason: Kanye is an amazing performer and cultural provocateur, while Kim, through her strength of character, has created a place for herself in the glare of the world's spotlight, and it takes real guts to do that.

Go ahead and cancel your subscription, Sarah Michelle Gellar. Make another spoof, James Franco and Seth Rogen. Vogue editor Anna Wintour stands by her decision to put Kim Kardashian and Kanye West on the cover of April's edition. In fact, she released a statement about it after Friday's immediate (and predictable) backlash. Here is what she said (via toofab.com), and our educated guess at what we think she meant. (Is it just us, or does her statement sound suspiciously like one of Miranda's rants from "The Devil Wears Prada"?) REDEYE

OUR TRANSLATION

Oh, OK. I see. You think this has something to do with you. You go to your newsstand and you select—I don't know—the April edition of Glamour, for instance, because you're trying to tell the world that you take yourself too seriously to care about what you read on the train. But what you don't know is that Lena Dunham is not just another celeb. She's not boring. She's not average. She's actually an icon.

And you're also blithely unaware of the fact that in February, Lena Dunham covered Vogue. And then I think it was "The Tonight Show"—wasn't it?—who had Dunham on the show? And then Dunham played the pyramid game with Jimmy Fallon. And then she, uh, filtered down through the gossip sites and then trickled on down onto the cover of some tragic magazine in a grocery store check-out pile where you, no doubt, fished her out of some clearance bin.

However, Lena Dunham represents millions of dollars and countless jobs and it's sort of comical how you think that you've made a choice that exempts you from the fashion industry when, in fact, you're reading the story that was selected for you by the people in this room. Kimye for lyfe.

Like a fur-gin

Madonna has never been one to shy away from making a statement, but a new Instagram photo suggests she's definitely been shying away from her razor. The 55-year-old recently revealed a photo of her fully furry underarm hair—real or fake—with the caption "Long hair.... Don't Care!!!!!! #artforfreedom #rebelheart #revolutionoflove." Oh sure, when Madonna does it it's a revolution of love, but when WE do it, it's "being too gross and lazy to give a damn."

Need for ... speed?

OK, we all kind of wondered what would happen to the "Fast and Furious" franchise after Paul Walker died, but we were kind of hoping it wouldn't be ... this. "They have hired four actors with bodies very similar to Paul's physique and they will be used for movement and as a base. ... Paul's face and voice will be used on top using CGL," a source tells the New York Daily News. We can't see this going well.

'Divergent' and dollars

Memo to movie producers: destroying Chicago = big box office $$$$$$. "Divergent," set in a spooky dystopian Chicago, made $56 million this weekend, winning the box office with the biggest opening this year besides "The Lego Movie." Two sequels are slated for 2015 and 2016, respectively. Maybe that will increase our chances of seeing Shailene Woodley drink kombucha in Grant Park.

Here there be dragons

Alert the nation's nerds: "Game of Thrones" might be coming to a theater near you. George R.R. Martin, who is writing the novels on which the HBO series is based, thinks the story may be outgrowing the small screen. "It all depends on how long the main series runs," Martin said, according to thr.com. "The books get bigger and bigger [in scope]. It might need a feature to tie things up, something with a feature budget, like $100 million for two hours. Those dragons get real big, you know." OH, WE'RE AWARE.

welcome, thorlings!

What's cuter than Chris Hemsworth? Chris Hemsworth holding an adorable baby. What's cuter than that? Chris Hemsworth holding TWO adorable babies. The dreamboat "Thor" actor and his wife, Elsa Pataky, had twin boys on Friday eonline.com reports. Our ovaries are exploding with joy just at the thought.

Whoa
Starbucks, and Teavana!"

—Oprah Winfrey, at the coffee giant's annual shareholders meeting in Seattle on Wednesday, announcing a collaboration with Starbucks to make and sell an Oprah line of Teavana teas. This would be a lot easier to make fun of if Starbucks weren't donating to charity for every Oprah product sold, so we're just going to leave it at that.
